Tena Koutou Katoa - Greetings to all parents and caregivers

Beach Writing

Writing is a focus for us this year. Below, are some great excerpts from the children's recounts about their trip to Foxton Beach.

- 'My legs pushed the crumbling sand behind me as my legs stretched forwards, determined to reach the icy water before it was too late. As I touched the salty water, an icy chill slithered up my legs.' Ash
- 'The water licked my feet as I walked along the wet sand next to the water's edge. As I walked, my feet left indents in the sand, some clearer than others.' Jack
- 'I was prancing on the hot sand, while most of my class was in the water, keeping away from the murderous sand. Then I felt a pinch on my feet and realised they were burning.' Catherine
- 'We set off down the beach. I was a bit behind everyone else because I had dug my feet into the sticky wet sand, and it took time to dig myself out. We walked through the crashing waves, the white foam swirling around our feet, going in ankle deep.' Emma
- 'Man this sand is scorching, I thought to myself. I ran into the cool foamy water and my feet started to feel way better. I continued to walk in the water, not willing to torture my feet again.' Jensen
- 'First we did the wheelbarrow races. I chose my buddy. She face planted in the sand and it was hilarious. On the way back, she face planted again! Then it was my turn. It was hard and my arms got tired quickly. The started to get wobbly and I fell into the sane. Wheel barrow racing is harder than it looks!' Ashlee
- 'We dug two separate holes. Then I decided to put a boardwalk around it and a moat, so using the sand from the hole, we built a thick wall, but the waves washed in and smashed it to smithereens A change of plans was needed.' Alex
- As the wave approached, it got bigger and bigger. I realised that it was a monstrous wave and looked as if it was about to devour me. I quickly backtracked towards the sand.' Tommy
- One activity stood out for me. That was the wheelbarrow race. To me, 'light and strong' is a good combination for wheelbarrow races. I was beginning to visualise how easy it was going to be for me. When we were ready and raring to go, my partner was lying on his stomach, all set. Little did I know that he did not meet my 'light and strong' criteria!

If you would like to support your children's writing, the best thing you can do is to encourage them to read.

Great readers are great writers.
